THE HUNT IS ON: Practice Returns With Another Multi-platform Theatrical Adventure!

A seemingly ordinary donation ceremony is interrupted when the unveiling of a lost masterpiece reveals decades-old secrets. What does this artwork have to do with missing treasure? Will you be the one to find the lost lily? It's time to find out...

Following the success of the 2021 interactive murder mystery The Bride Always Knocks Twice — Killer Secrets, The Theatre Practice (Practice) has partnered with National Gallery Singapore (Gallery) to present a multi-platform treasure hunt, Gallery Of Secrets: The Lost Lily.

Embark On A Treasure Hunt Unlike Any Other

Inspired by the artworks and history of the Gallery, Gallery of Secrets: The Lost Lily features Practice's signature blend of cinematography, theatrical performance and game mechanics.

The experience is broken into three parts. Audiences watch the action unfold onscreen with Chapter 1: The Painting, before diving headfirst into Chapter 2: The Hunt, where they are tasked to explore the gallery to solve puzzles, and interview characters to find the treasure. Finally, all mysteries will be revealed in the final film instalment, Chapter 3: The Treasure.

The production is available either as a fully digital experience or a physical-digital hybrid, where participants can visit the Gallery to search for clues. As further incentive, the fastest to identify the treasure's location stands a chance to win real treasure, up to S$1,800 cash!

What Secrets Will You Uncover?

Dubbed “a new frontier for home-grown digital theatre” by The Straits Times, The Bride Always Knocks Twice — Killer Secrets was a smash hit among audiences. “People were literally spending days compiling pages of research to crack the case!”, laughs Artistic Director Kuo Jian Hong. “Our aim is always to create a great game AND a great show. We're excited to build a new world for participants to fall in love with, and a fresh mystery to torture them with!”

Gallery of Secrets: The Lost Lily promises something for everyone. Escape room enthusiasts and gamers will enjoy untangling the puzzles and riddles a treasure hunt promises, while history buffs can sink their teeth into almost 100 years of Singapore history as they explore the former Supreme Court and City Hall. Finally, onsite clue-hunting at the Gallery guarantees a fun-filled day where participants trawl the halls before discussing hunches over a delicious “Alistair's Elixir”, Smoke & Mirrors' special Gallery of Secrets inspired cocktail.

But it's not just fun and games! Theatre lovers will enjoy the production's rich theatricality, stellar performances and stunning visual design, courtesy of Kuo and her team of theatre veterans and film industry stalwarts. Director of Photography Rachel Liew and production designer Daniel Lim join returning creatives include playwrights Jonathan Lim and Liu Xiao Yi, filmmaker and producer Kat Goh and film score producer and composer Joe Ng.

Artmaking For The Future: Unlocking The Possibilities Of A New Theatrical Format

No stranger to boundary-pushing works and artistic exploration, Practice has established themselves as a dominant force in Digital Theatre. “Digital theatre presents an opportunity to reach large numbers of audiences, without the restrictions of physical space or geographical boundaries”, notes Practice's Executive Director Daniel Goh. In 2021, The Bride Always Knocks Twice — Killer Secrets's week-long run reached more than 3,000 audiences in 16 countries, far more than most theatre capacities under current pandemic restrictions.

“National Gallery Singapore is delighted to collaborate with The Theatre Practice on this unique art experience that allows us to engage with diverse audiences in novel and exciting ways. Through Gallery of Secrets: The Lost Lily, we hope that audiences will be able to encounter the arts and our storied architecture in a new light, as we embrace multidisciplinary storytelling and all its possibilities through this innovative partnership," says Ms Suenne Megan Tan, Senior Director, Museum Planning and Audience Engagement, National Gallery Singapore.
